Direct Instruction programs have more than 40 years of research documenting their effectiveness and are used in thousands of schools across the country. For the first time ever, the National Institute for Direct Instruction (NIFDI), a non-profit organization founded by the creator of Direct Instruction, is offering a comprehensive oral language model that includes the curriculum, training and on-going support needed to ensure a solid foundation and future success for all students. Our Early Language Direct Instruction Model combines the research validated

Direct Instruction programs, Language for Learning and Language for Thinking, with our proven implementation support. It is designed to ensure that students acquire critical skills in the first years of schooling that will lay the basis for later success in reading and other subjects. All students become familiar with the foundational vocabulary, background information and sentence structures that allow them to understand and respond appropriately to teachers instructional language.
